

半導体・電子部品・開発キット

最新製品を1個から購入可能

MACNICA M MOUSER ELECTRONICS

半導体・電子部品の通販サイト

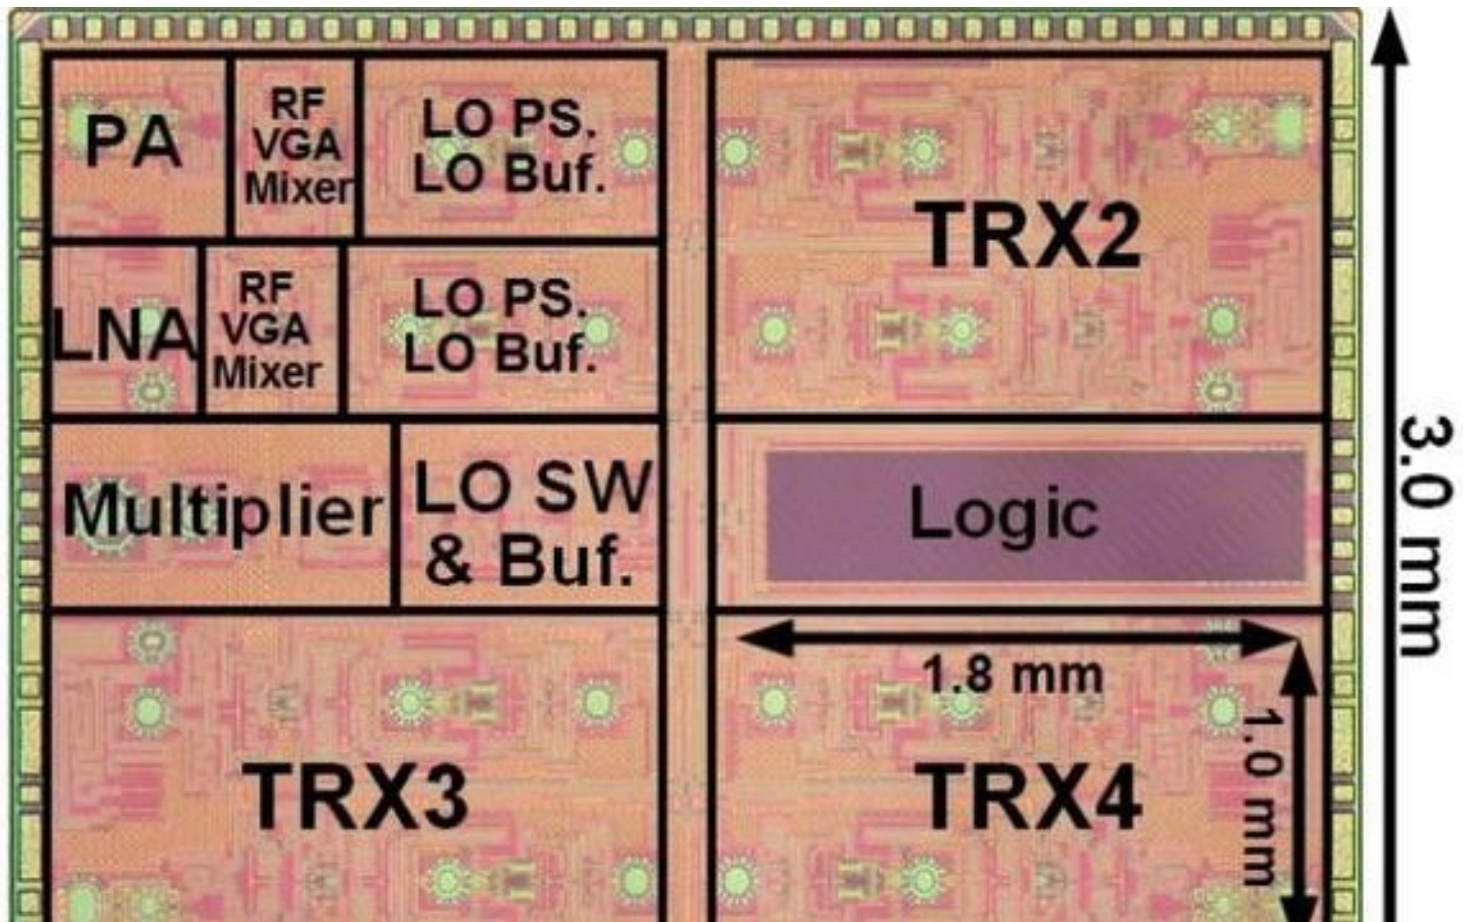

Communications

Japanese scientists develop tiny 28GHz transceiver capable of 5G speeds

Based on new 'beam steering' technique

We use cookies so that we can improve your experience of our site. Read our privacy and cookies policy to find out more.

Accept

Lee Bell

@llebeel

12 June 2018

0 Comments

Scientists at the Tokyo Institute of Technology have developed a tiny 28GHz transceiver meant for capable of establishing a stable high-speed 5G communication. Most modern transceivers designed for...

computing
WEB SEMINARS

Sponsored by workday.

Why integrated Cloud ERP is the whetstone your competitive edge needs

Thursday 20th June
at 11am BST

REGISTER NOW

To continue reading...

▼ Sign In

Don't have an account?

Computing helps IT leaders to make technology a revenue and innovation engine for their businesses. Our unique package of news and analysis enables you to discover what the smartest minds in the industry are doing and scan the horizon for what's next

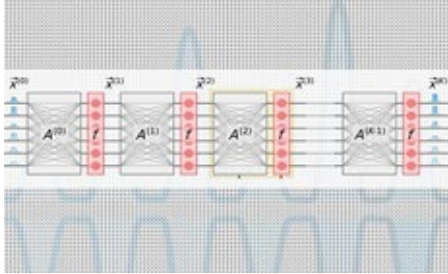

REAL-TIME NEWS AND ANALYSIS: find out what's happening and why in the technology space including news on your competitors and regulators – delivered to your desktop or mobile in a daily newsletter

MARKET TRENDS: learn about the implications for you of the latest shifts in everything from AI to machine learning and blockchains – evaluated in a new monthly editor's newsletter for CIOs

CIO INTERVIEWS: find out what fellow IT leaders are doing and why

Register

MORE NEWS

Energy efficient 'photonic' chip able to run large optical neural-networks developed at MIT

New photonic chip developed at MIT would use light instead of electricity

Hardware | 06 JUNE 2019

Microsoft withdraws facial recognition database of 100,000 people

'MS Celeb' database had scraped images and videos published online under a Creative Commons open-source licence

Software | 06 JUNE 2019

New BlueKeep malware proof-of-concept enables full system takeover, warns researcher

The vulnerability has seen Microsoft quickly release patches for end-of-life Windows products

Security | 06 JUNE 2019

Meg Whitman: Mike Lynch's conduct during HP's Autonomy takeover was 'completely unacceptable'

Whitman claims that Lynch only informed her of impending quarterly revenue shortfalls at Autonomy at 'the eleventh hour'

Leadership | 06 JUNE 2019

Contact

Delta

Marketing solutions

Enterprise IT Events

Incisive Media

Terms & conditions

Policies

Careers

© Incisive Business Media (IP) Limited, Published by Incisive Business Media Limited, New London House, 172 Drury Lane, London WC2B 5QR, registered in England and Wales with company registration numbers 09177174 & 09178013

Digital publisher of the year